

Grid Filters

The Constraining Grids provide a means to restrict the fracture modeling below, above, or in-between existing grid models (surfaces). For example, if the borehole fractures are confined to a limestone unit overlain by sand and underlain by unfractured clay, it would make sense to limit the fracture model based on a surface that represents the top of the limestone and a surface that represents the base of the limestone.

